Voters easily OK school budgets

Without discussion, and with only isolated votes against it, the $5,042,109 budget proposed by the SAD #44 Board of Directors was approved by district voters Monday evening.

Voters also approved, nearly unanimously, the district's proposed $89,656 Adult and Community Education budget and all other proposals on the nine article warrant.

There are approximately 3,800 registered voters in the five towns of SAD #44, but fewer than 100 of these attended this year's District Budget Meeting. Voters associated with the school system predominated among those attending the session.

The voters present took less than 30 minutes to dispose of the budget articles—in effect, approving an overall school and adult education budget of $5,131,765, of which $2,117,834 is to be raised locally. This figure is up 13 percent from the $1,876,518 raised last year.

Board Chairman Merton Brown said. following the meeting, that the increased level of board member involvement in this year's budget building process no doubt contributed to the easy acceptance of the budget by the community.

"This year the entire budget was presented to the whole board in a series of board workshop sessions," he said. "Board members always knew what the bottom line was.

"It's nearly impossible to understand the financial complexities of administerinvolved with the process," he said. "It's a staggering experience.

Dr. Jim Hudson, who cast a lone vote against various articles, said after the the kids, but that's not where it goes—it gets siphoned off." The school budget approved Monday evening includes the following assessments from SAD #44 towns: Andover-$449,420 | down 4.5 percent from last year); Bethel-$662,468 tup 11.4 percent); Greenwood-$297,392 tup 14.7 town. percent); Newry-$326,340 (up 46.9 percent); and Woodstock-$346,957 tup 14

At a brief, regularly scheduled meeting following the budget meeting, the directors also approved a grant application for second-year funding for the Maine-ly Orff music program.

Andover not awarded development grant

The Town of Andover received the news this week that it was not among the recipients of federal community development grants this year. Selectman Laura Hutchins said the letter the town received from the state Department of Economic and Community Development informed them that there were 25 municipalities that applied in Maine, and only 13 received grants. The letter encouraged the town to reapply and said a staff member would be willing to help town officials refine the town's application for federal funds.

The town had asked for $433,000 to pay for new sidewalks and shade trees, to build a loan fund to help residents pay for housing rehabilitation, and to assist in paying for properly closing the present article recommendations The Budget Committee last week stated emphatically that it would not make any recommendation on a budget in which it had no input.

On a 6-2 vote #Bob Davis and David Head opposed), the committee approved the motion by Bob Chadbourne that all salary and benefit line items be taken ing a school system unless you become from the departmental budgets and placed in a separate category in the Town Meeting warrant. In this way, Mr. Chadbourne argued, the departmental budgets will be able to accurately reflect meeting: "They're just spending too the amounts recommended by the much damn money down there. I'm not Budget Committee. Since the committee against spending the money to educate had no say on any salary or benefit items, the warrant should not seem to suggest that it did. "The Budget Committee has much less power than it used to," Mr. Chadbourne commented. He pointed out that it can no longer make suggestions on salaries or the numbers of employees hired by the

Affordable housing, land use, conservation, recreation, food and clothing banks, economic development, zoning, recycling, retail needs will be among the topics of discussion as the working groups from the Citizens Community Conference of last fall return to The

Bethel Inn for a Six Month Follow-up. The meeting, scheduled for Sunday, May 1, in the Conference Center, is sponsored by the Bethel/NTL Liaison Committee and SAD #44 Adult and Community Education. Individuals who did not attend the original conference are invited to join in. The sessions will run from 6:45

The working groups formed at the original conference will be reporting on their progress, and the entire group will discuss some of the factors that led to that progress, as well as look at some of the original goals to determine factors that blocked progress. There is no charge for the session, but pre-registration is necessary so that space and refreshments will be sufficient.

Anyone planning to attend the Followup is asked to call the SAD #44 Adult and Community Education office, 824-2780

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to respond to a letter printed in the April 13 issue by Denise Putnam concerning the Woodstock Selectmen.

I certainly feel that it is my right, as a citizen, and obligation as a municipal officer, to question any and all programs that exist in the school district. All of the selectmen's meetings are also open to the public, and if Denise Putnam had attended she would have known that what she had read in the paper was an example of poor and inconcise reporting by Mr. Wideman.

Apparently you have no idea, Denise, what was being discussed at the time of my misquoted statement concerning the Outward Bound program. My real statement was "They certainly are not going to learn how to read and write out in the woods." This statement was made in response to a prior comment that the students at Telstar may not be wellenough equipped to write a composition without spelling and punctuation problems. I never said this was true, but if it is, more time in the classroom would seem like a logical answer.

I would like to know where Mrs. Putnam came up with such absurd and oitbase statements. The Board of Selectmen in Woodstock is a very workable board and each of us holds high respect for one another. I would like to know some instances when the selectmen have tried to tear the town apart. I feel that to imply that the selectmen are trying to tear the town and each other down is a totally irresponsible statement and shows a lack of facts and an abundance of hearsay. Mrs. Putnam seems to be trying to separate the town and create chaos, but by the number of phone calls and personal support I have received, you are in a very small minority and have little or no support.

It shows a lack of common sense to use hearsay and make a statement about George Hooper not wanting the school to have a computer. To my knowledge, this statement was never made and was fabricated for who knows what purpose.

Finally, I was elected to serve the Town of Woodstock to the best of my ability, and if you, Mrs. Putnam, have a problem with any of my decisions, please feel free to nominate one of your people next March at Town Meeting. I think you will find that the town's people will do the right thing and keep the type of person in office that is not afraid to stand up and speak out on an issue. It seems that your ideal candidate would be one that sits back and accepts whatever is told to him without question. This would be a very dangerous person to have on the board and would be detrimental to the town. Please, next time you read an article in this paper concerning any statements I may have made, call me to get the correct wording of the quote and what it actually addresses. I, for one, am not ashamed to be quoted in the paper and have no reason to lie, but I will not let this type of reporting continue. Mr. Wideman must feel he has something to gain.

Selectmen will open fire station bids May 2

Wednesday, April 27, 1988

A number of local contractors have expressed interest in the plans for Newry's first fire station, Fire Chief Virgil Conkright told the town's selectmen at their regular meeting Tuesday.

Bids on the 26-by-26-foot building are scheduled to be opened May 2 at 7 p.m. at the town office. Bids on the project may be turned in to the town office at any time prior to the opening, Selectman Roger Hanscom said.

Planning Board Chairman Jim Sysko told the selectmen that the planning board will conduct an on-site inspection today (Wednesday) of the proposed Bear River subdivision proposed by the MCW Corporation. The inspection will begin at 6 p.m. Upon its completion the board will return to the town office to review their findings and to discuss condominium plans of Sunday River Skiway.

The next regular meeting of the planning board is scheduled for Wednesday, May 4. A special public hearing on the Bear River Road project will be held at a later date.

At their meeting the selectmen also discussed summer road work with Road Commissioner Marshall Fleet. Mr. Hanscom said tentative plans call for the road crew to tar the Sunday River Village Road and the upper part of the Sunday River Road.

When the sponsors of LD 2178 and LD 2461 stood before the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, they had their work cut out for them. It was their task to convince 13 committee members that something as simple as a styrofoam cup could pose a serious threat to our environment, and that these foam products made with chloroflorocarbons (CFCs) should be banned from the state.

This is the same Energy and Natural Resources Committee that has been working days, nights and weekends to resolve such huge issues as growth management. There would be little time to consider insignificant legislation.

With the avid support of several environmental groups, the Commissioner of Environmental Protection and a number of concerned citizens, the sponsors made a strong case. This week both bills received unanimous support in committee and in the Maine Senate.

It is hard to believe that a foam cup. supermarket meat trays or various types of fast food packaging could have any impact on our environment, but scientific research indicates that they do. The dangerous common element that all of these products share is a form of polystyrene, which emits CFCs during the manufacturing process.

The use of foam packaging for food and beverages has come under attack in many parts of the United States. Driving this controversy is concern about the effects of CFCs on the earth's ozone layer, the amount of space it takes up in already over-burdened landfill sites, and questions about air and water pollution from the incineration or landfilling of polystyrene.

The impact of CFCs on the atmosphere's ozone has been researched and debated for years. The ozone is a layer of gas above the surface of the earth which screens much of the sun's ultra-violet radiation. CFCs are believed to start chemical chain reactions that decrease the number of ozone molecules. The loss of too much ozone will intensify ultra-violet rays and is considered to be harmful to humans and the environment. A recent report from a panel of 100 atmospheric scientists has prompted a re-that the ozone layer is being depleted much more rapidly than anyone predicted. They warn that this depletion will not be an easy tide to turn. In 1978, the nonessential use of CFCs (in areosol sprays) was banned in the U.S. and Canada, but it is apparent that stronger measures are

Another strike against foam packaging is its non-degradable nature. While the useful life of a foam container may only be a week or two in the supermarket freezer, its landfill life will extend several hundred years. As a result, foam packaging places a much greater burden on our already limited landfill space than other more rapidly decomposed paper

Strike three against foam containers can be seen with more and more frequency along many Maine roadways. Those fast food containers, tossed out of car windows, will not decompose tomorrow or the next day. Unless someone picks them up, they're likely to be kicking around for another century. Last week the Maine Legislature did its part to address this problem. The first bill to gain legislative approval was LD 2178, "An Act to Ban Disposable Styrofoam Food and Drink Containers from Public Cafeterias." This measure prohibits the use of non-degradable containers by food services at facilities that are associated with the state. This would include public schools. The second measure, LD 2461, "An Act to Prohibit the Sale of Polystyrene Foam Products Containing Chloroflurocarbons," addresses the larger problem of polystyrene-containing CFCs in everyday, marketable products. For example, this bill would affect fast food and supermarket packaging. It is important to note that most industries producing and selling products made of polystyrene are responding well to the growing concern about its impact on the environment. New technology has already been developed to provide safe, alternative packaging. These bills simply Jerome Holt EXCAVATION

five buffalo in the herd are ready to market. The buffalo each weigh about 600 pounds now, he says, but when they are full grown the bulls will weigh over a ton and the heifers 1,600 to 1,800 pounds. If the buffalo prove to be an economically viable livestock, Wally hopes to eventually expand the herd to 75 animals. It's a testimony to the marginal profitability of farming, however, that for now Wally is forced to working heavy construction in Alaska during the summer. "Without that money," he said, "there's no way we'd be able to try this." The Jones Farm, like most farms in the region, is threatened not only by low profitability, but also by inflated land prices and rising taxes. Still, Wally Jones and his father are determined to keep the farm intact and in the family. "They'll have to carry me out of here," Richard Jones said, "because there's no way they're going to drive me out." The other Oxford County farms honored last week were the Robinson-Parsons Homestead Farm, of South Paris, the Kimball Farm, in Rumford, and the Record-Trundy and Young farms, in Buckfield.

The Maine Public Utilities Commission warned telephone users that they may not be talking with a telephone company operator when placing long distance calls from hotels, motels, airports and privately owned pay telephones. In some cases, additional charges may be billed to consumers, often without notice. Questions and complaints filed with the PUC include the following:

Why were you charged $3.73 for an uncompleted call you made from a restaurant pay phone using your NET calling card?

Why do your son's phone calls billed to you on his AT&T credit card from his Florida college vary in amount for the same time of day and length of call? Why do you reach a long distance operator in Texas when you try to dial friend in Brunswick from a Portland hotel telephone? Chances are those calls were handled by one of several "alternate operator services" (AOS) now operating in Maine, the PUC says.

A fast-growing newcomer on the increasingly competitive telephone scene, the AOS companies provide longdistance services using non-telephone company operators. Hospitals, hotels, support the herd with the money he earns motels, airports, universities and customer-owned coin-operated telephone (COCOT) vendors are the kinds of customers who contract with an alternate operator service. The businesses receive a commission for each call placed through the service. The higher charges that can be complaints to the Maine Public Utilities much more than the normal rate." In extreme cases, Ms. Alexander said, that charge could be as much as 10 times more than the rates charged by the local telephone company for in-state long distance calls or by interstate long distance carriers such as AT&T, MCI and U.S. Sprint. These high AOS charges can include various motel or hotel. hospital or pay phone surcharges. They may also stem from technical limitations and billing agreements that force the AOS provider to route the call through a distant switching station. Sometimes the customer is even charged for uncompleted calls, including local calls. The AOS industry within Maine is subject to regulation by the PUC only when the customer seeks to place a call between two Maine locations. If the telephone call is interstate (going outside Maine) in nature, the individual AOS company has merely bought and resold long distance time from the regulated long distance company. The Federal Communications Commission, which has interstate jurisdiction, says it has had a vast increase in complaints from customers using AOS operators for interstate calls and is considering future regulation. Representatives of some alternative operator services indicate they will

The Mystery of the Diamond Collar

One day in San Diego, two detectives, Bobby and Sarah, were in their office. They hadn't had a mystery in weeks, but then out of nowhere there was a scream and then a lady yelling, "Stop, thief," in a discontented way. Why it was Miss S. Squeaky. So Bobby ran down two flights of stairs to see what was the matter. Sarah also went down to see what was the matter.

Miss S. Squeaky said, "My cat Sunflower has been stolen."

"Calm down and tell us all about it," Bobby said. "Well it all started when Sunflower was in the garden chasing bees, and out of nowhere a man jumped out of the bushes and grabbed Sunflower."

"Did you get a description of him?" "Yes, I did get a look at him," Miss S. Squeaky said.

"Tell us the description of him please," Bobby asked. "So Miss S. Squeaky said he had a red and black checkered cap and one of those black eye masks, red shoes, blue pants and a red shirt. "OK, Miss Squeaky, we'll type it into the computer right away."

The next day they found out that it was Clint, from Rocky's mob. But Sarah the other dectective, didn't know that Rocky was on the loose because she hadn't seen the newspaper article yet.

So they spent the rest of the day checking old houses and shacks and alleys. While they were searching an alley they found a black furball and boot footprints and some cat footprints too. So they followed them and they led to an old beat-up shack. So Bobby and Sarah snuck up to the shack window and peeked in a little bit so the robbers wouldn't see them. And what they saw was unbelievable. So they got their guns and knocked down the door and said "You're under arrest." So they returned the cat to Miss S. Squeaky.

The Unicorn Family and the Crowded House

Once upon a time there was a girl unicorn named Nancy. She was a very beautiful, prancy unicorn. She had one brother and four sisters.

Sometimes it felt like the house was too crowded. It felt like the house was going to burst. When they got up in the morning they all crowded into the bathroom to brush their teeth. They had a big fight and squirted toothpaste at each other.

All the girl unicorns shared one room. They all shared a king-sized waterbed. One night they pulled the plug out of the waterbed. The water squirted all over the place. So they had to go get their raincoats, hats, boots, and umbrellas.

The water dripped down through the ceiling, right onto Daddy Unicorn's head. He was not pleased. He stamped up the stairs in an awfully angry mood. When he saw the mess he yelled, "Clean that mess up. Make the floor shine and the rug dry. If it's not done in ten minutes you will all get a spanking!"

The girls worked quickly. Soon the floor was shiny and the rug was dry. In the morning Daddy and Mommy had a big surprise for the kids. They told them the family was moving to a much, much bigger home.

Rich Castle, Poor Castle

Times were bad for the people. Many of the people were poor. In the streets sat a small child. Her name was Mary Lee Corset. She wore brown, dirty, ragged clothes. She lived seven blocks away from market Square, which is where she is now. She silently watched as food was being sold, and it made her hungrier and hungrier. Later, when everyone was gone, she picked up food that had fallen on the ground. When she had gotten what she wanted, she went home. Tonight she ate a half of a dill pickle, a small piece of toasted bread, and a half-empty container of rice. It was all she would have for two or three days because the market was only open on Saturdays and Wednesdays. Mary ran home to a small broken-down shack. As she came near the shack she heard the angry cries of her drunk father and sick mother. Her father slammed the front door and stomped out of the house. He saw Mary staring at him. "Don't just stand there you worthless child. Get going," shouted her drunk father. Mary ran towards the forest and she didn't stop until she reached the other end. She saw Mullyville

Beach, and she slowly walked down towards the beach and sat down. She stared at the crystal-clear water. She imagined the castle or palace where King Edward lived. Royal clothes, fancy feasts, and to sleep on the soft beds would be like a dream.

She looked around herself and she saw pieces of paper, a beer bottle cap, flowers, sea grass grew around her, sand, and a big piece of rubber. She collected the materials and started making a castle.

She used a piece of string that she found in her pocket for a walkway to the castle. Sea grass served as the long green lawn of grass. The bottle cap was used for a window. Of course sand made the castle. The flowers were a magnificent garden. The piece of rubber was a wading pool for the castle. After she was finished she walked toward King Edward's castle. After an hour of walking she stood in front of the gate. She saw King Edward with his cousins Princess Elizabeth and Lady Jane Grey. They were laughing and talking. Then Princess Elizabeth saw Mary. She felt sorry for the small child in her dirty rags. "Come here," said Princess Elizabeth sweetly. Mary stepped forward and walked up to the gate. She stopped when she saw the guard and stepped back.

Lady Jane Grey knew she was afraid of the guard. "Thomas, open the gate and let her in," said Lady Jane Grey. He opened the gate and let her in. "Now what's your name?" asked Princess Elizabeth kindly.

"I am Mary," replied Mary politely.

"Won't you stay for dinner?" she asked glancing at the thin figure.

"Oh, yes. I'd love to," said Mary happily.

After a feast of meats, vegetables, and huge cakes for dessert, Mary decided to go home. "I have to go now," said Mary thankfully. Lady Jane Grey led her to the palace gate and let her out. "Come back again, won't you?" asked Lady Jane Grey.

"Maybe," called Mary. She ran down the streets trying to get home before her father did. As she ran past the pool parlor she saw a man come out. He grabbed hold of her, and she could see that it was her father. "What do you think you're doing out here? I am sick of looking out for you. Don't ever come home again." With that he threw her out into the street. She spent her night out on the street. In the morning she wandered back to the castle gate. There she saw Princess Elizabeth and Lady Jane Grey waiting for her. They ran to the gate and let her in. She went with them to their bedroom. She told them what had happened the night before.

"They don't want me anymore," said Mary softly. Princess Elizabeth felt sorry for Mary. "Why don't you stay here with us?" asked Princess Elizabeth.

"Would you mind?" asked Mary.

"No, of course not," said Lady Jane Grey.

The King approved of Mary staying there at the castle.

Even now the rich castle still stands, but no one knows if the sand castle still stands.

The Mysterious Man

One dark night as I was walking home, a strange man suddenly appeared. He walked quickly around the corner and then disappeared. In a few moments an alarm rang out. The quiet street was now a roar of sirens as police cars came around the corner.

In a few minutes a policeman came over. I ran up to him and asked what had happened. He said that $3,000 had just been stolen from the bank. He said that each night money was stolen from the same bank, but the criminal never left a trace. I told him about the suspicious man. He thanked me and then I went

That night I went home and decided that in the morning I would solve the mystery. The next day I told my parents I was going to a friend's house. I started off for the bank. When I got there I found some deep skid marks and a trail that led to the woods. I followed it. Soon I came to a clearing with a little cottage.

I sneaked up to the window and looked inside. Sure enough, bags of money were all over the couch. I tried the door. It opened. I slowly went inside. Just then a man came out and started shooting. I ducked. He shot again, knocking down a lamp. I grabbed the lamp and just as he pulled the trigger I flung it at him. It hit him on the head. I found a phone and called the police.

In about fifteen minutes the police drove in. They tied up the man and recovered the money. They called me a hero, and I got $3,000 for solving the mystery.

The Book of the Gerbils' Bables

Friday morning March 18th, 1988, my class walked in the classroom. They discovered that the gerbils had five babies. The kids were all happy.

When a baby gerbil is born, it doesn't look much like a gerbil. It is pink and hairless with a blunt nose and just a little stub for a tail. Its eyes and ears sealed shut like most mammals. It does not have any teeth. But the teeth and the fur come in quickly, and by the time it is a month old, the baby looks like its mom and dad.

And if the father thinks that people are attacking the babies, by crowding around the cage, he will eat the babies. I don't want the father to eat the babies, so I stay away from the cage. The babies are cute.

The mother's and father's names are Smokey and Blacky.

My class had three gerbils. There were two boys. Their names were Tuffy and Anthony. There was one girl. Her name was Cleopatra. We had Anthony and Cleopatra at the same time, but we had Tuffy separately. Tuffy was the first gerbil my class ever had.

My country road has been jubilant, as April ran through. I have found flowers cupped in tranquility for spring is unfurling her floral banners.

In the distance summer smiles and walks over the edge of the world, as spring stretches herself lavishly across the land. Budded trees are against the sky. A feathered migration is heading north. But in places when I was walking a chilled wind was blowing against my

I went to visit my little brook and listened, as it ran and heard it say, "I'm not jogging to keep in shape. I do not know what is beyond. I just touch the boulders, as I pass. I follow a path bounded by trees and banks. I make a contribution to life for my soft waters feed the trees, the fish and the insects. I hope my murmur makes you happy, as I move onward, ever onward toward the ultimate."

The liquid tinkling carried for a surprising distance through the trees. I can recall the sound. It was a bell-like tinkling of an empty tin can being lifted and dropped in rhythm by slow ripples running among the pebbles. The repetition was musical and soothing like a cowbell heard in the distance at twilight.

As I walked on, I swung my field glasses over a wide arc. At times, a large bird spread it wings, flapped deliberately two or three times and soared for a surprising distance, then dropped down on Every tree was 3 to the pond. The pure-white gull then disengaged itself from the pond-surface tapestry, flapped its wings for a moment then climbed upward again, with mowing wings. I can still visualize it racing across the miles.

I moved across an open space of moss, beneath the silent which lay like a wide, green carpeted Looking upward i room back among the trees.

Here I crossed the brook and came of a cosmic sea. An slowly down a path where at times the me into endless sp moss was so thick it deadened my footfalls like a plush rug.

Then I turned sharply and entered a on the pond short space floored with ferns and uneven with ing noiselessly, as the remains of tree cutting.

The charm of the day was on the hillside of the earth. I rambled from one russet patch to another. The combination of this delicious air, which I did not want to be warmer or softer, suited my climb.

I was apt to forget that I may see raw and blustering days for a time yet. How the needles of the pine shone, as I looked down over the hill, westward.

It was a bell-like tinkling of an empty tin can being lifted and dropped in rhythm by slow ripples running among the pebbles. The repetition was musical and soothing like a cowbell heard in the distance at twilight.

As I walked on, I swung my field glasses over a wide arc. At times, a large bird spread it wings, flapped deliberately two or three times and soared for a surprising distance, then dropped down on to the pond. The pure-white gull then disengaged itself from the pond—surface tapestry, flapped its wings for a moment then climbed upward again, with mowing wings. I can still visualize it racing across the miles.

I moved across an open space of moss, which lay like a wide, green carpeted room back among the trees.

The charm of the day was on the hillside of the earth. I rambled from one russet patch to another. The combination of this delicious air, which I did not want to be warmer or softer, suited my climb. I was apt to forget that I may see raw and blustering days for a time yet.

What a mess greeted us on April 16. Snow again! But at this time it won't stay long. I saw a flock of geese honking their way up pond-protesting loudly. A pretty sight appeared out back of my house. A bunch of golden daffodils in bloom

Telstar teams off to quick start

In their first season back in the Mountain Valley Conference, the Telstar Regional High School baseball and softball teams are more than holding their own. The girls are undefeated, at 40, and the boys, after a shaky start, are back to playing .500 ball, at 2-2.

The softball team began the season as they left off last year, with strong pitching, good defense and good hitting. The girls have rolled to four victories in the last two weeks, beating Jay 19-0, Mexico 28-12. Livermore Falls 17-4 and Leavitt

Heidi Belanger threw a 2-hitter versus Jay, limiting the Tigers to only six baserunners for the entire game. Mindy Robinson, Nancy Miller and Kelly Bartlett paced the hitting with three hits apiece. Angie Jordan and Missy Johnson each contributed two hits.

The Mexico game proved to be a wild affair, as the Pintos jumped out to a 6-0 first inning lead. The Rebels replied by sending 20 batters to the plate in a walkfilled second inning. Collecting four hits. 12 walks and an error, the Telstar squad plated 16 runs. Belanger picked up her second win, contributing three hits of her own. Robinson and Johnson added two hits apiece.

In the Livermore Falls game Belanger limited the Andies to seven hits, giving up only two hits in the last four innings. Buffi Taylor (6 RBI) and Mary Hutchinson had three hits each, while Johnson. Bartlett and Belanger had two hits each. Against Leavitt, Belanger's second two-hitter brought her own record-and the team's—to an impressive 4-0. Coach Jun Lunney attributed the strong start to Belanger's strong pitching and to a solid defense, led by Mary Hutchinson at third base, Mindy Robinson at first, Nancy Miller at shortstop, Kelly Bartlett in right field and Missy Johnson behind the plate. Credit also goes to a well balanced oftense, which combines timely hitting and aggressive baserunning. After the first three games, Bartlett was hitting .555. while Robinson and Johnson were each hitting .500. Buffi Taylor was leading the team in RBI, with seven.

The boys' start was a bit shakier, but Coach Levi Brown is confident his talented and experienced squad will

"I haven't pushed the panic button yet" he said, "We'll win our share of games." The baseball team beat Jay convincingly. 15-5, in the season opener. But then the bats fell quiet, as both Livermore Falls and Madison shut the Rebels out. Against Leavitt, Telstar scraped out a narrow, 2-1, victory, but only with the help of untimely Hornet errors. In past years Telstar began its seasons with weak opposition from small, independent schools; this year it faced the toughest of the MVC teams right off the

"Livermore Falls and Madison are probably the two top teams in the conference." Coach Brown said, "and their pitchers are likely to be the best we'll see again until the playoffs."

The Rebels' performance in the two defeats was at least well balanced: "Our pitching was so-so, our fielding was horrible and we had no hitting," the coach said. Eight errors in the two games-seven of them throwing errors-also contributed to the losses. In the long run, the losses may well turn out to be a blessing. Picked to at least make the MVC playoffs, the Telstar nine has to avoid complacency and overconfidence. "We've been sitting back just expecting to win," Coach Brown said. "Maybe we needed to lose to get hungry again, to light that fire."

Both the baseball and softball teams will be in action at home today (Wednesdays against Mt. Abram, and they will travel to Madison for games on Friday.

Saturday, April 16, was a winter wonderland picture. The trees loaded down with heavy damp snow, snow plows, sanders and saltspreaders were out. Two hours was long enough for the show. chairs didn't get hard, and there were refreshments to munch on.

NEW EQUIPMENT AT STEPHENS Stephens Memorial Hospital has purchased two pieces of medical equipment that will improve service to western Maine. The hospital has purchased a C-arm (cardiographic/flouroscope x-ray unit) and a dedicated mammography unit, both of which are maintained and housed in the radiology department. The C-arm is a device specially suited to general surgery, orthopedic surgery and for the implanting of pacemakers. In addition, the unit can be used in the special care unit and throughout the hospital. Often considered as a movable x-ray unit, the C-arm provides the operating room staff with constant monitoring during a surgical procedure. The new unit can store up to 36 images and can produce hard copies of images for documentation.

The Norway hospital performs nearly 2,400 surgical procedures each year and the new unit was necessary to replace an older model that the hospital has used for nine years.

Over half the monies used to purchase the C-arm were raised with contributions to the 1987 annual fund. In the annual drive, nearly 400 donors contributed $55,000 toward the purchase of the equipment. In addition, the hospital was able to sell the older C-arm to help defray costs for the new unit. The dedicated mammography unit was purchased to meet the increased demand for breast screenings. The hospital averages eight to 10 mammography screenings per day, and the demand for this service is expected to increase.

Wednesday and not too much sun today. Hope tomorrow the sun will shine while I make a trip to Portland to see the allergy doctor. It doesn't seem as nice riding in the rain or cloudy weather as in the sunshine so will keep hoping for the best. Seems as though we have seen more clouds lately than sun but got to keep thinking it will change and take advantage of the sunshine.

Russell did just that yesterday and rototilled the garden out front and got some peas planted. Hope they grow well and flourish. They seem to like cooler weather and that is what they will be getting now. Also planted some spinach and swiss chard. Bugs don't get at them so much if the weather is cooler and it sure takes a lot to freeze the plants. Russell keeps busy doing something all the time. He has cut brush around the place and made it look so much better. Today he is hauling off the brush piles he has made around and about. He has some plants coming up that he has planted here in the house and will soon be able to put them into the cold frame, we hope.

I kept my fingers busy today with some sewing. Got some dresses in the making for a couple of little girls I love and got them done today. I have been knitting some sweaters this spring. Peggy showed me how to carry yarn to make patterns and did that in two sweaters and then did a pretty knit pattern in another that I just finished. They are children's sweaters but it has been fun making them and seeing how pretty I could have them be. Got to get back to doing some crocheting for next Christmas. Large things take quite a while so got to get started to have time to make several items. It is lots more rewarding to make gifts tham to buy them or at least that is what I think. He has cut brush around the place and made it look so much better. Today he is hauling off the brush piles he has made around and about. He has some plants coming up that he has planted here in the house and will soon be able to put them into the cold frame, we hope.

I kept my fingers busy today with some sewing. Got some dresses in the making for a couple of little girls I love and got them done today. I have been knitting some sweaters this spring. Peggy showed me how to carry yarn to make patterns and did that in two sweaters and then did a pretty knit pattern in another that I just finished. They are children's sweaters but it has been fun making them and seeing how pretty I could have them be. Got to get back to doing some crocheting for next Christmas. Large things take quite a while so got to get started to have time to make several items. It is lots more rewarding to make gifts tham to buy them or at least that is what I think.

Quite a little snow we had this past weekend! We must have gotten at least five inches of the white stuff but thank goodness it melted good. Some good fertilizer for the poor man as they say. Maybe that will help the peas grow that Russell has planted. We will sure hope so anyway. A number of things got cancelled but the Tri-Town Ambulance program didn't and from what Peggy and Russell told me, it was a great success for which I am glad. The dance at Greene was cancelled so Peggy and Russell went to the program at West

Went to see the doctor in North Bridgton on Tuesday and did some errands in town before coming home. I had taken some films into LaVerdiere's at the grand opening and called to get the pictures. What a nice store they now have. Enjoyed shopping there before while in the old store but it should be even better now. More roomy and things down where one can see them better. Very nice.

children on teaching them to "stay safe."

Besides the general safety rules such as buckling up seatbelts, and street safety, how to protect themselves from sexual abuse. Teaching young children in a nonthreatening way through children's literature, music and discussions helps them develop a strong sense of valuing and caring for themselves. Children love the songs on Rick Charette's album "Super Power." A lyric they sing again and again says "I've got super power, power to do most things myself, I've got super power, I can do many things well. From this powerful line children sing about the many ways they can care for Community Concepts, Inc., the nonprofit community action agency that sponsors the Headstart and daycare programs at the Children's Center also sponsors the Child Abuse and Neglect Council of Oxford County. If you are interested in what's available in this county to help prevent abuse, give Nadine a call at

The Children's Center is proud to continue to provide quality care and education for young children with its two existing programs. The center is staffed who have had the special education and training to provide for the developmen-

The center also recognizes the demands on parents placing their children in a pre-school setting and offers many support services through direct involvement in the programs, workshops and access to other programs with a full-time social service aide. to arrange a time. Stacey Brown, of Bethel, was the winner of the Easter food basket raffle the parent group recently had for a fund raising activity. Parents raise $500 each year that they turn over to the Policy Council to help pay for utilities. Anything over the goal goes directly to children for program materials, equipment or repairs, as decided by Parent Group.

The Center accepts on-going applications for the daycare program. Children three to six years of age whose parents are employed, actively seeking employment or attending school full- or parttime are eligible for the program. State Title XX monies fund 18 "slots" that assess fees on a sliding scale based on family size and income. The center also accepts "private" fee paying children for the daycare program as space allows. Daycare is a full-year early childhood development program and parents interested in summer or fall care are urged to fill out an application now.

Each week, this column will spotlight a different member of the Bethel Area Chamber of Commerce. The purpose is to give some understanding about the various fields of endeavor of the Chamber members.

Citizen Press, Inc. is the parent company of The Bethel Citizen-the local newspaper covering central Oxford County. The business was established in 1895 and has operated under various owners. The present ownership took over

In addition to publishing the weekly newspaper, Citizen Press also has a stationery store to serve the office supply needs of local businesses, and the company also operates a complete print shop.

Both the newspaper and print shop have grown rapidly in recent years. In the past 312 years, the newspaper's paid circulation has grown from 2,000 to 3,000 papers per week, while advertising in the paper has doubled. It is by far the dominant paper in its circulation area, and is the fastest-growing paper in all of Oxford

The growth of the company has gone hand in hand with modernization of equipment and increase in staff. In the past few years, the company has purchased two computerized typesetting systems, a large press, a large folding machine, a state-of-the-art process camera and an office computer. The company hopes to purchase another press this year and also expects to computerize the addressing of the subscription list.

The newspaper is still too small to have a staff of reporters and therefore relies heavily on items sent in by correspondents and publicity persons. These items are typeset every weekend by George Gibson. The trip was coordinated by 5th Grade teacher Mary Newcomb and is the culmination of a year-long study of early American life.

THE BIBLE AND THE TV GUIDE On the table, side by side,

The Holy Bible and the TV Guide One is warn but cherished with pride, (Not the Bible, but the TV Guide). One is used daily to help folk decide. No, it isn't the Bible, it's the TV Guide. As pages are turned, what shall we see? Oh, it doesn't matter, turn on the TV. Then confusion reions, they can't all agree, On what they should watch on the old TV. So they open the book in which they

No, not the Bible, but the TV Guide. The Word of God is seldom read. Maybe a verse e'er they fall into bed. Exhausted and sleepy and tired as can be, Not from reading the Bible, from watching

So, then back to the table, side by side. ts the Holy Bible and the TV Guide. No time for prayer, no time for the word, The plan of Salvation is seldom heard. Forgiveness of sin so full and free, Is found in the Bible, not on TV. (Author Unknown)

THOUGHTS FROM THE

Pastor's Study

The Bethel Area Clergy Association, with the help of pastors of surrounding churches, brings you these meditations. Not based on any set theme, they will be individual for each pastor. It is hoped you will find in these words, comfort and help for your deily lite.

If I were to ask you how many good friends you have had in your life, what would you answer? I'm sure we would first have to determine what constitutes a friend.

On a poster on our back porch there is printed these words, "A friend is someone who comes in when the whole world has gone out." Emerson said, "I didn't find my friends; the good God gave them to me." Proverbs 18:24 says "there is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother." This says a lot to me, for I have one brother and he and I are very close. Who then is this friend?

There is a poem, its author is unknown, that says in part:

My friend, I stand in judgment now, And feel that you're to blame somehow. On earth I walked with you by day, And never did you point the way.

You knew the Lord in truth and glory; But never did you tell the story. My knowledge then was very dim; You could have led me safely to him.

Though we lived together here on earth. You never mentioned a second birth. And now I stand this day condemn- he hesitate to tell his friends how they ed, because you failed to mention him. You taught me many things, that's true; I called you "friend," and trusted day, that if you will turn from sin and self could have kept me from this fate. When I read that poem I realize I have the Lord shall be saved." Acts 2:21 often not been as true a friend as I ought to have been, for some I have never told the story of a God who loves them and has provided eternal salvation. This however is not the case with the "friend that sticketh closer than a brother". Jesus Christ. He plainly declared the way of salvation. He plainly told his friends that he came that they might have eternal life. In John chapter three, explaining to his friend Nicodemus the way to new life, he states in verses 17 and 18,

"For God sent not his son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved. He that believeth on him is not condemned: but he that believed in the name of the only

KERSEY APPOINTED

David Kersey, son of Tim and Judy Kersey, of Bethel, has received an appointment to the U.S. Naval Academy for the Class of 1992.

David is finishing up a post-graduate year at Gould Academy as the 1987-88 Alger Scholar, a scholarship program made possible by a generously endowed gift from the late Lieutenant General James D. Alger, U.S. Army, and his wife Consuelo.

David reports to Annapolis on July 6 for two months of orientation during which the Plebes in the Class of 1992 prepare themselves physically and mentally for the rigorous program which starts in late August upon the return of the upperclassmen. Kersey competed with the largest and most qualified applicant pool in the history of the U.S. Naval Academy. Over 15,000 applications were reviewed by the Board of Admissions for a class of 1,300.

A graduate of Telstar High School in 1987. David will follow a path similar of that of his brother, Tim, who received his naval officer's commission at Annapolis in June 1986.

BETHEL SENIOR CITIZENS

Who or what is a senior citizen? Is it someone over 65 or maybe over 55? Or is it someone who is retired or someone collecting Social Security? Nobody seems to know. But Bethel Senior Citizens are a special group. Many of them remember the way it was. Of course many have moved here because Bethel is a great place to live. Once the Main Street was lined with elm trees and there were plenty of parking spaces. Some of us remember the stern discipline of Professor Hanscom and the 7-9 p.m. enforced study hours. Many enjoyed the loving mothering of Ethel Bisbee. It was possible to take the "down" train to Portland and the Sleeper at Union Station and wake up in Boston in the morning. The "up" train stopped here at 10

Hanging Maybaskets was as much a part of spring as contests with wildflowers.

Under the direction of professional dancer Barbara D. Gasser, the students will demonstrate the skills they have learned this year in jazz, tap, ballet and musical comedy. The dancers, ranging in age from five to nearly 50, will perform short programs either solo or with their dance classes.

The public is invited to attend and show encouragement for the students, who have worked long hours over the course of the season.

The evening promises to be one of enjoyment for all. A donation of $2 for adults and $1 for children will help to cover the cost of renting the auditorium.

THERE'S GOLD ON THAT THAR HILL-MOLSON GOLD THAT IS, hundreds of cases of it, along with export ale and malt liquor. The shore and shallows of the Pleasant River in West Bethel were littered with $100,000 worth of beer Monday evening, when a tractor trailer from the Canadian brewery flipped over while taking a curve on Route 2 near the intersection with Fleming Road. The truck driver sustained only cuts and bruises, but his wife, who was in the passenger side of the cab, received head and back injuries and was taken by Bethel Rescue to Stephens Memorial Hospital in Norway, Ron Coulombe, who lives at the intersection, has become accustomed to trailer trucks dumping valuable cargo on his lawn. "A few years ago it was 16 cords of wood," he said, "and before that it was a car carrier with nine new pickup trucks." Unfortunately, he lamented, someone always seems to show up to haul the goods away. In this case, the beer will be destroyed.
